Better than the park map, but do not trust it for kayaking By Nicole M It is better than the NPS park map but when it comes to navigating a place like Nine Mile Pond, trust your GPS and carry a compass. It has the numbers totally inaccurate and that could cause some serious problems. They claim it is up to date, but it is not! The thing that annoys me about the folks who publish this map and field guides is they get it vetted by some knuckle head who poses as an authority but is clueless. It never occurs to them to try to use their product or watch their target market use them. So, the product is mediocre and they could care less. At one time National Geographic stood for some level of integrity but that seems to be a thing of the past. 4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Save money and get NOAA/USGS maps By Andrew After taking this map on a trip to the everglades I will warn all: do not rely on this map for navigation. It is not up to date and it is very basic. It is fine for the basic layout of things. But do not use on the water trails for canoeing/kayaking. Get a NOAA map. We took both and if all we had to rely on was this map we'd still be there. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Almost useless. I have been happy with National Geographic before By Angeles The reviews were not positive. I assumed they were exaggerated. Should have listened. This is truly awful. Almost useless. I have been happy with National Geographic before, but this is the least useful map that I have ever ordered.
